Cambodia Receives Over US$1 Million for Explosive Remnant Clearance

AKP Phnom Penh, May 05, 2014

The U.S Department of State donated more than US$1 million for the clearance of the existing explosive remnants of war in the eastern part of Cambodia.

Cambodian Mine Action Center (CMAC) and Norwegian People's Aid (NPA) as implementers of the funded project formalized their partnership through the signing of the Memorandum of Understanding late last week at CMAC training school in Kampong Chhnang province.

"The assistance proves a great fulfillment of moral duty by the U.S because most of the explosives were used by the U.S during a war against Vietnam," said Secretary General of the Cambodian Mine Action and Victim Assistance Authority H.E. Chum Bunnong.

According to the statistics by the U.S. Department of State, some 2.7 million tons of explosives were bombarded on Cambodian territory during the war, of which there were 19.5 million cluster bombs – the primary focus of the aid.

Starting from May 1, 2014 to Sept. 30, 2015, the project with the exact amount of US$1,761,394 began with creating a safe living environment for the locals in Kampong Cham and Kratie target areas.

Since 1993, Cambodia has received supports of around US$60 million from the U.S. for the clearance of the explosive remnants of war along the Cambodia-Vietnam border.

Cambodia's Economic Growth Can Sustain

AKP Phnom Penh, May 12, 2014

"Dynamic economic growth of Cambodia will continue, but the Kingdom should keep up with successful implementation of its policies," projected Dr.

Benny Widyono, former UN Secretary General's Representative in Cambodia.

"The policies include the reduction of remaining poverty, in particular through the transformation of Cambodia's workforce from agriculture to production, construction and services," added Dr. Benny Widyono in his address to hundreds of students at Paññāsāstra University of Cambodia late last week.

Co-organized by the Paññāsāstra University of Cambodia and Center for Khmer Studies, the presentation focused primarily on the economic impacts and challenges of globalization in Cambodia.

Cambodia has maintained at least 7 percent its annual economic growth in the recent years and is getting itself ready for the upcoming 2015 ASEAN Economic Community of approximately 600 million populations.

The globalization makes people get closer together through goods and services exchange, investment, financial flow and migration.

It's very important, added the former UN Secretary General's Representative in Cambodia, that Cambodia needs to improve skills for its people through comprehensive training and quality university education.

According to Director of National Center for Tuberculosis and Leprosy Control (CENAT) H.E. Mao Tan Eang, thanks to the ministry's tireless
